

A KENTUCKY HISTORY MOMENT

One of Jesse Grant's tanyards was near the celebrated Esculapia Springs. This illustration is from "Collins' Historical Sketches of Kentucky, Cincinnati, 1847." Kentucky Historical Society, Martin F. Schmidt Collection, 2004.41.9.

LEWIS COUNTY: FROM TANNERIES TO THE WHITE HOUSE

Jesse Grant was a successful tanner in Brown County, Ohio, and eventually owned three tanneries across the Ohio River in Lewis County. Had Jesse's eldest son, Hiram Ulysses Grant, been interested in following in his father's footsteps, Jesse would not have sent him to the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, his name would not have been mistakenly changed to Ulysses Simpson Grant and U.S. history would be different.
